

Figure 2: Magnetic imagery from the heli-magnetic survey (images are Reduced-to-Pole [RTP] images). The data are preliminary only and further processing is required to properly define domains of differing magnetic character. Preliminary interpretations define moderate magnetic intensity diorite domains (corresponding with mapped diorites), and weaker anomalies in areas of argillic ('clay') alteration. Strong northwest-trending structural domains are defined by alignment of anomalies.